"Greenwich Village Follies of 1920" at Theater of

By Heywood Broun

John Murray Anderson, who devised and staged "The Greenwich Village Follies of 1920," must have been born and raised, we take it, somewhere east of Suez, where the best is like the worst. His hospitality is all-inclusive. After seeing Margaret Severn do the extraordinary dance of the foolish doll with the mask, by W. J. Benda, one is moved to believe that Anderson is a producer with a true touch of genius for revue, but before that impression has had time to set he pops an imitation of Eva Tanguay into his show.

Surely salvation cannot lie this way. What could be more thankless than an imitation of Eva Tanguay? Here the John Murray Anderson, who devised greater devastation. John Murray Anderson is a producer who is capable of devising a stage picture as gorgeous as "The Song of the Samovar," and then turning about and entrusting a large portion of his show to a performer named Frank Crumit, whose manner and method are distressingly like that of a Y. M. C. A. secretary trying to be a good fellow at a stag smoker.

Mr. Anderson is a pioneer in almost everything which is most novel and beautiful in the mounting and costuming of musical comedy, but when he is confronted with the necessity of introducing an amusing interlude he engages Collins and Hart. There is a consistency in the work of this producer, but it is wholly in regard to visual things. Like his previous shows, "The Greenwich Village Follies of 1920" is a constant delight to the eye. Ziegfeld has done nothing so fine as the Russian number which we have already mentioned, and the Valentine song and the Sin-Shop are almost as fine.

The rest is hit or miss. Anderson's tine song and the Sin-Shop are almost as fine.

The rest is hit or miss. Anderson's theory seems to be that any familiar vaudeville act may be made over into something new and striking by placing it in front of a gorgeous silver curtain instead of the customary drop of Main instead of the Chern makes of the Steamship Freight Brokers' Association and the Transatlantic Associated Freight Conferences and all moore and other members of the Steamship Freight Brokers' Association and the Transatlantic Associa

In one respect the performance is admirable throughout. The dancing is conspicuously good. Ivan Bankoff and Mlle. Phebe made the Samovar number thrilling, as well as beautiful. Margaret Severn is one of the loveliest performers we have seen on the stage, and James Clamons is an amazing stunt dencer.

This request was complied with, although pursuant to the shipping act of 1916 all minutes and agreements had already been transmitted to the Shipping Board at Washington in regular course. Another attack against Hillah, west of the Euphrates River in Mesopotamia, was launched by a force of 1,500 rebellious tribesmen on Thursday, but the attackers fell back under heavy shell fire, says an official statement issued by the War Office to-day.

"The situation in the Muntefix area of Mesopotamia—that is, between the lower Tigris and the lower Euphrates grows more ominous," the statement continues. "A violent holy war is being preached and this tribe is expected shortly to throw in its lot with the insurgents. The situation around Samaweth also gives rise to anxiety. Movements of rebel bands have been observed and renewed attacks on our posts are expected."

It was his impression, he said, that any forwarder or broker who was "all rive was permitted to join the association.

Aimed at Orderly Business

"My recollection." said Mr. Thomas.

"is that the association was formed simply with the idea of conducting business in an orderly manner.

"Although I bave not gone into the matter, having only been informed this afternoon that the indictment and suit had been entered, the litigation probably is due to the agitation of these dissatisfied brokers during the last two years or more."

None of the steamship Companies is a rember of the Steamship Freight Brokers' Association, was formed right. Thomas said.

Harry Fowler, of Caldwell & Co., member of the Steamship Freight Brokers' Association, said he saw no possible basis for the indictment, and did not know who might be primarily responsible for the charges of conspiracy. He added that ne did not some of the transatlantic lines, and one of the attorneys representing the Transatlantic Associated Freight Conferences. He said:

"This is a suit in equity brought by the United States against Walter Moore and other members of the Steamship Freight Brokers' Association, and also against a large number of steamship companies and some of their officers. The bill asks for a decree declaring that the Steamship Freight Brokers' Associated Freight Conferences."

Of the seventy-five freight forwarding and brokerage companies named in the indictment and petition are the following:

American Bluefriesveem, D. C. Andrews & American Bluefriesveem,

"More than a year ago the United States Attorney for this district requested the secretary of the Transatlantic Conferences to produce the minutes of the conferences and all agreements, correspondence and documents relating to freight brokerage. This request was complied with, although pursuant to the shipping act of 1916 all minutes and agreements had already been transmitted to the Shipping Board at Washington in regular course.

Anderson has added a touch of showmanship to his equipment as an imaginative and tasteful producer. For the first time he has been able to put pace
Follies of 1920" is admirably brisk. It went smoothly at its first night performance, and the "Tams" number, in which the audience was enlisted to help dut in the general effect, brought a touch of excitement which endured throughout the evening.

a conflict between the Steamship principal objection of outside brokers to this association seems to have been that its constitution limits the memthership to persons who were either

Text of the Petition

In the petition for a permanent injunction and dissolution of the two associations mentioned in the indictment the purpose is explained in the following language:

"The petitioner, the United States of America, by Francis C. Caffey, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, its attorney, acting under the direction of the Attorney General, brings this proceeding in equity, to prevent further violations of the act of Congress, approved July 2, 1890, entitled: 'An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce Against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies,' together with acts commendatory thereof and supplemental or additional thereto, and on information and belief which alleges and says" etc.

A division of the petition headed: "Interstate and Foreign Trade and Commerce" sets forth that grain, oil, lumber, coal and other commodities, "and manufactured articles produced and made throughout the United States and in foreign nations" has been transported shipped or forwarded "as aforesaid" for "a great many years past, up to and including the present time."
